Libya. The final frontier. Nations no longer exist. Cosell is dead; Nixon buried. Refugees from a time long past head for an inescapable destiny. They are vaguely familiar. Voices from the cathode box. We join them now as the freedom fighters trek across the desert. Aided by the munitions provided by Terpil and Wilson and the Rat Patrol, the commandos hurtle towards the Final Countdown.

"Oh, suffering sweatboxes. The heat is unbearable."

"Stop complaining, Dr. Smith." The young man folds some rolling paper and lights up. "Here, smoke this and relax."

"Will Robinson! You belligerent imp! I never."

"Stop calling me that; my name is Bill Mumy. No world now. Caput. No more reruns."

"Oh, I think I'm getting a migraine. I feel so faint."

"Doctor McCoy, see to this man. Heat exhaustion I believe."

"Your vulcan intuition never ceases to amaze me, Spock."

"Quite, doctor." The vulcan's eyebrows raise. "I've got something on the scanner."

"Warning, warning. Alien approaching." Metal arms thrash spastically.

"Will, put on a party tape. Turn that shit off."

"No. I believe the mechanical unit is correct." Spock points to a figure crawling in the open expanse of sand. "Life form, not human."

"Call security. I'm in command now...Security? Good...Haig here. Apprehend the perpetrator; interrogate and terminate."

"The prisoner keeps saying that some little kid stole his magic carpet. I think he's been chewing on lotus leaves."

"That's Odysseus you fool. This guy's just been out here too long. Either that, or he's got VD."

"Thank you for your analysis. Are there any other conclusive results from the interrogation?"

"Well, he keeps saying one thing over and over, 'I will show you. The world will see who is liar. Reagan is liar.'"

"Quite obviously a deluded malcontent. Dematerialize him."

"Wait. Nothing hasty, gentleman. He might provide good material for the next

Calculatingly typed,
Jason A. Kaldis "the thrill is back..."

Spock was right. The prisoner was right. Reagan is liar and right as they come. Strangely enough, no rights can undo the situation. The renegades from the celluloid of the past flee towards Tripoli. An Iranian Death Squad follows in pursuit. A nasty man in a black cape in the middle of the Libyan Desert leads them. He is a fool. But he is scary. His name: Ayatollah Vader. He sweats a lot. It is hot. His circuitry is malfunctioning. Too much sand. He calls on his technician:

"Come here helpless haman," his voice rasps deeply. "Bring me the can of Dust-off. I feel heavy. Not since the Tunisian Desert have I felt this way."

The technician passes a small black and white can which Vader in turn sprays on his privates and sighs deeply. "Ahh, thank you, Tech Skywalker. Impressive."

"I learned it from my Dad. He worked at Proctor and Gamble. Anti-perspirants, deodorants, shit like that. Then a little Freon, and poof, Dust-off cologne."

"Your father was ... how do you say - a flaming pansy. It was easy for me to deal with him when the time came. I merely replaced his (loud explosion drowns out word) with some circuits. But enough history, I fear that the Rebels are daring to test my Farts."

A large booming explosion rips apart a nearby dune. Skywalker, seeing his chance, escapes through the billowing sand. Over his shoulder he yells, "May the Farts be with you," and scrambles for the Rebel caravan. He is dressed in white and is obviously a good guy. They accept him heartily - almost.

"Warning, warning. Humanoid approaching. Humanoid. Humanoid. You fight like a robot. Ha, ha, ha. The Black Knight will fu..."

"Thanks Spock. That shit was driving me crazy," Captain Kirk flips open his communicator. "Bones, how is the sick bay?...I see...Dr. Smith...Put him under."

"Hypochondria, Captain, is a delicate illness and the administering of par-bituates is often detrimental to the patient's well-being."

"Spock you are out of your mind (Jake, you are out of your mind. I know.). I forbid you to speak with Private Haig in the future."

"Very well, Captain. The future is rather diminishing. We'll never make it to the shores of Tripoli at this rate. There's only one more agenda and this is the last of the

EXECCON MEETING MINUTES FOR Monday Registration Day February 1, 1982

THE FINAL COUNTDOWN Continues:

"Spock, get a full report from Tech Skywalker. He might talk more openly if you took him off warning for the next term and pardon his probation. I want to know what kind of Force is driving those Iranians. To think, they dress in black and cover their women's faces in the desert...Life is so obscure."

"Kirk, get a grip on yourself. Want some acid?" Bones winks, "Just kidding."

"I fail to see the humor in your interfacing with the Captain, Dr. McCoy."

"Hey, how come you guys are getting all the lines, huh? I mean we were on TV too? Black and white. A space ship. Five year voyage. Why?"

"Well, Will. It's like this. Your show sucked..."

Dr. McCoy was right (as everybody seems to lean in this direction these days it comes as no surprise); Will's show did suck. But what of the rest? Their fate:

"Captain, I have a party on the tricorder, from the southwest."

"When they get on the screen, I want you to go to Inviso and smart bomb them."

"Yes, Captain." Spock's slanted eyes flickered for a moment as his hands went for the assortment of buttons on the machine. "Captain, I have failed. A lander materialized on our ship. The Enterprise is no longer free. In fact, it just died."

"Spock! All my friends - they died! Have you no drop of human emotion in you?"

"I think not Captain."

"Okay, freeze Vulcan. You guys are talking way too much." Will Robinson levelled the phaser at Spock and Kirk. "One move and you're tonight's hamburger."

"Dr. Smith, you gaaaay boyyyyy....wakee upp. What a nniiinnnnnyyy!!!"

"Hey, Mr. Ed, where'd you come from? I didn't know horses could survive in the middle of the desert."

"They can't you little idiot. But an engineer can easily splice videotape in the middle of the show so why can't a dumb secretary introduce me just like that?"

"You've got a point there, Equus. I was just pondering the undeniable truth of your existence and I deduced..."

"Will someone take Private Haig's Thesaurus away and give him a very large dab of peanut butter right up the ..." Suddenly, the desert sands explode around the party. "Holy shit, we're under attack. Man all stations. Kirk, Spock, you are reinstated. So are you, Breaker Morant. But you'll die in the end (sorry to spoil a good movie). Hey, Churchill, you're expendable too. I happen to know you're going to die some day anyway. Why not today? Hey, anybody got any quarters? I'm all out of missiles. How do you expect me to defend my cities?"

"Hey Patton, stick your big head back up your..." A sonic boom jolts the party and all hands hit the sand.

"Oh my god! It's Ayatollah Vader and the Iranians (on Warner Bros. records and tapes at the Coop for $3.99 this week only)!!! His Farts are really strong!"

"Warning, warning. Alien gas approaching. Attack, attack. Mars is supreme. Ha, ha, ha, ha. The Black Knight will fuc...eeeewwwww!" Will pulls the tape again.

"Where's that Libyan nut? That guy Mallomar Crunchbar? I'm gonna go find me that English secret agent guy from England. Sheee-it. You boys don't know how to fight. How can y'all fight in them big black and white robes and dresses. A god-damn bunch of women. Goddamn foreigners."

"Sheriff, If you do not silence yourself, I'm going to stick this crowbar so far up your butt you're gonna need an operation to remove it."

"I ain't afraid of no slanty-eyed alien from a defunct TV show. I bet you'd even narrate some dumb show that went looking for dead people and buried garbage..."

"Sheriff, while we argue here we are fast losing the battle (we are running out of space and time - a great idea for a TV show - Spaced 1999...). Vader, even now is dueling with Tech Skywalker." rough cut to the boys duking it out:

"Hey you can't do that!" Tech screams as his hand is bit off by a camel. "Shit! How am I gonna beat that big ogre now? Crack on his clothing? His tailor?"

"I came here to give them my Farts, and they want a fucking fashion show!" Vader rips off his robe to reveal that he is nothing more than the last shitty introduction to a

They sat in a circle, reserved yet alert. All nine knew their individual yet concerted missions. A motly crew at best; their space ship Cygnus X-1 stood erect on the pad awaiting its corporeal passengers. One at once noticed Silvester H. Hughes the financier of the mission, a flaunter of much, he was lacking in length. The expert on details was Hippie Landlubber; he was into Jeremiah Weed nowadays. Caesar, a product of modern genetical engineering, was perhaps the most happy-go-lucky guy on the missions and he appreciated cheap sex. The lone survivor of cancerous old Jersey, Pewf Gnaw had thighs that thundered a mighty tune. The master of communications was L'Rush-a man who had few morals (so it was said). Chin Chang was a very quiet woman; rarely did she have anything to say. She had plenty of pennies and spoke with the voice of Luciano Pavarotti. The only member of the mission who was blessed with natural rosy cheeks was C. Oilman; she related to people like a pro. A maker of shoes, Spam barely made the mission since he had only three extra cents for the cab fare from Logan. The final member of the crew was and is well trained by a former astronaut, believe it or not her name was Rooster from birth.

A loud siren screamed its lonely message to the nine. They slowly got out of their comfortable chairs and started towards the Cygnus, its ghastly image painted against the red brick sunset. Their mission was clear: Travelling to the far reaches of the universe, finding new worlds, new alcoholic concoctions, new controversies, they are to seek out and annihilate inferior life forms¹.

Opening the airlock of the Cygnus X1 they saw

IN THE BEGINNING

Breathe deep, the gathering gloom,
Lights on Earth fade at our sonic boom.
Speed builds and the nine are in cold sleep.
Nothing to be heard, not even a course 6 beep.

Deep into the unknown space they travel,
Only to be awakened by the sound of a gavel.
Can Caesar foresee
What shall be?

A strange and mysterious light appears at infinity's reach
Oh to walk on the white sands of that beach...

"Caesar...Caesar, wake up!!!"
Not a stirring in his crogenic capsule.
"Damn humans, I just don't know how to deal with this carbon based Scum", the computer was evidently pissed.
"Caesar, if you don't wake up I will administer the course six odiferous simulation and..."
"Nooooo not that, I am awake," Caesar screamed, jumping out of his now orange ridden capsule.
"We have a problem," the computer now started in a serious tone, "A Strange and mysterious force has been detected...extreme danger is indicated

Caesar was spellbound, he had never encountered this in the slop room.
An alien life presence was then felt on board, terror struck the heart of Caesar-here he was face to face with the notorious J. Spence Love-and he was holding

DEATH AND DESTRUCTION AT LAST

Before J. Spencer Love had a chance to find a terminal on board to reprogram the computer and take control, Ceasar pushed the Chippy Pie Cryogenic override button and awoke to other 8 passengers in the cygnus X-1.

Spam being the crewman in charge of capital punishment kicked J. Spencer in the balls-no response-it was true-no gonads. J. Spencer then breathed on spam; he was knocked out like having a 6 hour crew practice. Realizing that more potent weapons existed on board the Cygnus, Chin Chang grabbed a well lubricated bucky ballon LASER and shot at J. Spencer and.....

Lo and behold.....

Right before their eyes', it was a gruesome end, the matter transformed, it had taken place. J. spencer's body underwent the most incredible ordeal, in the span of about 3 minutes his body had regressed from adulthood to childhood-he went from adulthood to fetus. The crewmen stood astounded at the sight. The soul of J. Spencer Love was released to wander the universe in search of revenge. All that was left of his fragile self was a bacon-lettuce cheeseburger and the Report of the President; 1981-1982.

Delivered at the February 23, 1982 House Meeting.

This has been quite an active term of office for me. Like all terms, it included both accomplishments and failures. At this point, it is important to learn from the failures and try to improve on the accomplishments.

This was the first year of operation of the country kitchen. It started operation on March 1st, 1981. The first country kitchen chairman was Larry McKenna who managed to successfully get it off the ground. At first, things were not running very smoothly. In many cases utensils disappeared. Larry, after suggesting some improvements to the system, resigned and Michelle Heng was elected to succeed him. Larry's suggestions together with Michelle's improvements finally resulted in the smooth operation of the kitchen.

This was also the first year where the recent Constitutional Amendment concerning Dual Social Chairman took effect. It seemed to work well and it did serve its purpose of reducing the burden on the social chairmen. However, due to the fact that the social budget was so high this year, they still had a lot of work which they handled very successfully. Congratulations, Julie and Frank.

Baker House also recovered the grand piano after a long wait. Since its return, it has been tuned regularly by the person who repaired it, Gary Brownfield.

A temporary committee was organized to look into the elections procedures and especially the preferential voting system which is used. This came up as a result of a miscount of the ballots in the election for Judicial Committee members held on February 24, 1981. I appointed the committee members, with Kim Coldwell as chairman. The committee was ratified by the House and its findings revealed that the present system is the most suited for Baker House. These results were presented at the April House meeting.

We also had a Constitutional Ammendment concerning the election of the Judicial Committee members. The time was changed from the first House meeting in the Spring term to two weeks after the General election, or in case of a holiday, the next available school day. The candidates are now required to have petitions with signatures of one fourth of the House residents and the voting is to be held on the date stated above from 8:00am to 8:00pm under the supervision of the elections chairman. The reasons for this Constitutional Ammendment were to make the first House meeting in the Spring term shorter so that more attention can be given to the discussion of the budget and also so that everyone in the House got a better chance to vote. The first time this ammendment will be put in practice shall be on Tuesday February 23, 1982.

The third edition of the Client Team report is in the process of being completed. It is an update of the 1976 report and it shall be used to get a definite commitment from the administration as to when they plan to restore the physical, systems of the House as well as everything else that needs restring. A meeting with the administration will be held within the next month at which this topic will be discussed.

Copies of the Constitution as ammended to date are now available thanks to John Goree.

This was also the first year in a long time that the Housing system was undercrowded. This was due to the opening of 500 Memorial Drive as well as the unusually small size of the freshman class. As a result, two graduate students were assigned to Baker House. Both are former residents of the House and will be here for only one semester. A special House meeting was called to decide on their room priority. This was decided to be below the seniors and above the juniors. Since this decision was made during IAP, it was made clear that that decision was to apply only to these two cases and was not to be a permanent House policy. If the House thought it was necessary to set a permanent policy concerning this matter, it would have to be brought up at a future regular House meeting.

On another occasion, The House voted down rebudgetting money to pay for discharged fire extinguishers. The general feeling was that it does no good to get the money out of the House budget since only a minority shows up at House meetings anyways. The idea was that if people saw fines stated on their bills, they might be more conscious about damages of House property.

A major victory of Baker House was marked when the Institute tried to push a new payment plan on the students. As a result of a letter signed by 150 Baker residents, the administration was forced to postpone the plan and develop it further.

Relations with other living groups were normal except with the fraternity DKE. As a result of their stealing the Christmas tree, mas tree, the Dean's Office was asked to hold a hearing which shall take place within the next two weeks. The outcome of the hearing is unclear, however, it is certain that major punitive and disciplinary actions shall be taken against said group.

That was a rundown on the major events that took place. As far as recommendations for the future, I suggest that the President and the VPIR keep close working contact and communication. I also recommend that the hierarchy of the VPIR and the VPFS be interchanged. I feel that the most important part of the President's job is to maintain close ties with the institute, a duty that the VPIR would be most suited for in the absence of the President. Also, freshmen should be encouraged to participate in House activities as early as possible.

I have appointed Louise Jandura as the sophomore representative on the Room Assignments Committee.

In closing, I would like to say that I enjoyed my term of office very much; it was a learning experience. I wish my successor the best of luck and I hope he enjoys his term as much as I did.

Respectfully submitted,

Abdelrahman I. Makhoul.

My term in office gave new meaning to the abbreviation VPLFS, but the house still managed to ~~acquire~~ acquire some new things. We now have a new sewing machine, speakers, tuner, preamp, and microphone stands. Last year a new position was created ~~that~~ that reports directly to the VPFS, TV Knob Chairman. ~~My term~~ I ~~put~~ put so many miles on the stereo cart, ~~that~~ one of the wheels fell off. During my term in office I turned 22, and something else fell off. In closing I would like to say that Life sucks, but if you're lucky Mike Landmeier^(sr) will take your place.

Outgoing Report: VPIR 1981

Relations with the MIT administration were promoted with three cocktail parties--two in the Spring and one in the Fall. Traditionally these have been paid for out of the Social Chairmen's budget--with some additional money from VPIR. My responsibilities mainly entailed sending invitations and set-up/clean up for the party. The choice of date was made by social chairmen which is necessary to prevent overlapping with other social events--in general more effort should be made to find a date which is ~~more~~ convenient for the administration since most were unable to attend either of the Spring cocktail parties. Possibly more responsibility of the party organization should also rest with VPIR in order to take some of the work-load off of the Social Chairmen.

The House was helpful in preventing (or rather delaying) a change in the payment plan which would otherwise have taken effect in Spring 1982. This was done by a letter, signed by residents, and sent to President Gray, The Bursar, and DSA. The formal protest (as opposed to riots, etc.) was well-received by the Administration and prompt action was taken.

Alumni relations were also solicited by cocktail parties and a letter (proposed) to alumni concerning renovations (by Clint Ham). It was also brought to my attention that recent alumni in the area often do not feel welcome at cocktail parties, etc. and that ~~former~~ they should be invited by the VPIR. The party for graduating Senior was continued (for the second time)* was very successful.

Living group relations are not very good. ~~On~~ Suggestions to Execcon to invite another house over for a 'fun bar' Happy Hour were not met with much enthusiasm. It was the general opinion that these events are not successful in promoting new acquaintances and that instead, people should all be encouraged to invite their own friends. We did send out 'Holiday Greeting Cards' to other living groups as well as administrators. In general, living group relations have been hurt most by a very small minority of the House who ~~consistently~~ display prejudices or just obnoxious behavior at games, parties, and other gathering where they appear to be representing the House.

One of the difficulties of this office is the lack of guidelines in either the Constitution or through established practices as to the duties of the job. Not only do the President and VPIR have to get along with each other, they also have to communicate frequently and try to establish a clear division between the two jobs. This Fall Monty and I decided that this needed to be done and he suggested that the VPIR should handle 'social' relations whereas the President should handle 'political' ones. This seems to be a division that has been made in the past, but by no means ⁱⁿ every year. I think that this is too limiting to the VPIR and as a result diminished the role of President by making him deal with petty complaints/problems with the Administration.

To help solve this problem, I would support a change in the internal power structure of Baker which was suggested by Manty - VPIR and VPFS should switch places in the order of Execcon officers. Secondly, the President and VPIR should make it clear to the administration that the VPIR should be contacted with most trivial administrative matters (especially announcements and complaints). Finally, for any future VPIR who may be so dedicated as to read this, a list of ^{possible} duties: # drop of Execcon + House meeting minutes to DEA (Bob Sherwood) and Housing (Gene Bramer), hold cocktail parties for administration and/or alumni, monitor actions of Client Team and Comcom (make sure they do something), participate in tutor selection, hold party for graduating seniors (and invite alumni?), send out Holiday cards, buy House meeting Doof (or food as it is commonly called)

VPRO Report '81-'82
VPRO: Rita Nothhaft
Spent: $3255.35

Well, since we all love our freshmen and sophomores dearly, I feel I can say the past two R/Os have been successful.

This past R/O we sent out an intriguing summer mailing, gave tours, played some sports and fed everyone breakfast. Special events included ice cream and fire drill on Thursday, a Caribbean Party on Saturday (Remember the Barrel!) and a women's shishkebab and a jazz band on Sunday. As usual these Baker House events were well attended (a few frat boys even came by).

After R/O week we gave the freshmen a delicious Common's meal and handed out the Baker Confidential Guide to welcome them to Baker House and to introduce them to our housemasters, tutors, Baker advisors, greasy upperclassmen and greasy food. R/O also sponsored a housewide barbecue, ice cream fiasco and trip to the Blue Hills Reservation to get everyone acquainted, to make the freshmen feel at home and to show them how great Baker really is.

Now, as a member of Execon for two years, I have a few things that I would like to pass on:

I feel it is important to show your interest in the activities in the dorm whether the event be in the organizing, entertaining or cleaning up stages. Encourage people to take part, but don't twist their arms off- just let them know what's going on and the fun they're missing. And when people are trying to take part, help them get started, encourage them and thank them for taking an interest.

I like to feel that everyone is having a good time and that is why R/O has always been so special to me. The people of Baker House never seem as together as they do during R/O week. Thanks to all of you who helped me these past two years. Vivian has a lot to look forward to and I wish her much success. Thankyou.

Report of outgoing social chairmen:

Both of our opinions

- f 1. We would like to thank everybody who helped out.

Our job would have been much more difficult without you.

Julie 2. We would like to take this opportunity to comment on social activities with other living groups. It is preferable from the social chairman's point of view that activities be thrown for other living groups rather than with other houses... Further, members of Baker House should invite their friends from other living groups to social activities rather than waiting for the house to extend an invitation to a living group.

- f 3. We think there were too many social events at Baker during the last term. Each event was not as special as it could have been because it happened every week.

4. We hope that you will continue to help ^{as much as you helped us} and future social chairpersons. At clean up. An hour of time on a usually wasted Sunday (1 PM) is an appreciative means of expressing thanks for a party.

- Julie* 5. We think you should be made aware of the time commitment involved in running a happy hour. This expected social activity ~~is~~ usually takes from 2-8, including shopping, set-up, the actual running of the happy hour, and the clean up afterward. All residents of Baker House are encouraged to take six hours out of their Friday to help ^{happy} run a hour.

Frank 8102 cases, 2nd central

- FJS* 6. We spent 17,000 dollars and had a damn good time!!

Athletic Chairman's Report

Richard L. Norton 81-82

2/23/82

We won some, we lost some. Among notable Baker Athletic feats we had a weekend in which we sent out 6 soccer teams and nobody scored.

The year went fairly well. ~~I~~ For this coming year I have one comment. The fact that most teams are made up by individuals now causes problems. What happens is people are talked into signing up and never show up, team don't have enough players and forfeit ~~for~~. And it is very difficult for the athletic chairman to make up teams with randoms.

I suggest the following, Even if a team is totally formed everyone should write their name on the general sign up as soon as they know they want to play. If you have a small group you want to play with you should indicate that instead of recruiting an entire roster. This insures that the person had enough interest to sign his name and also should encourage others, freshmen in particular to sign up. It is much more encouraging to see 200 names for softball than 20.

In closing I would like to encourage everyone to play some things, it's a lot of fun and to get involved in. I'm as managers, ^{or} referees it's worthwhile ~~and a lot of fun~~. And people are always needed.

Outgoing Report, Freshmen Representative, 2/23/82

Sarah M. de León

I've enjoyed being Freshmen Representative and being on ~~the~~ the Executive Committee of Baker House.

I feel I accomplished most of what I set out to do.

Some of the successes were the Freshman Pancake Breakfast and the purchasing of the 8.01 cable. I hope that I helped to bring the Freshman point of view to Execom and helped them to adjust to life at MIT; I also hope that I helped them to be more social and to come out of their rooms more.

One of the things that I noticed about the office was that it took until almost the end of first semester to understand the way Execom operated. I hope that in future an Execom officer can sit down with the new Freshmen Representative and explain exactly how Execom works and what the new Representative's duties and responsibilities are. I also hope that at the first budget meeting of the year money can be appropriated for the use of the Frep.'s functions, like pancake breakfasts, so that the money will not have to come out of other officers' already-appropriated budgets in the middle of the year. I wish the next Frep. much luck and ~~will~~ will give him/her all the help he/she needs in his/her new office in and life at MIT.

Sincerely,
Sarah M. de León

Chairman-Howard Reubenstein Vice-Chairman-Mark Templar
Secretary-Tony Riccobono

The committee had its first success before I officially took office. Myself and other members of the committee aided the DAB in obtaining a 50 point reduction of the minimums.

We continued Baker's communication with the institute. One letter was sent to Gene Brammer outlining our suggestions for system improvement. The response was not satisfactory. I also sent a flame to the Tech which was a lot of fun and well received.

A survey of entrees (and misc. other information) served downstairs was conducted and this allowed us to get the worst six items removed from the menu. We also held a few menu meetings which we felt were useful. If we did not gain anything else from them, we gained Liz's respect and friendship.

In an effort to improve DAB effectiveness we founded DormCon ComCom. Unfortunately we have not seen much from this new committee.

New Officers

Chairman-Mark Templar "Co-Chairman"-Howard Reubenstein
Vice-Chairman-open (Liz Snyder?) Secretary-John Pitrelli

Mark and I effectively switched rolls for the coming year. Mark will be sending a letter to the institute, concerning the removal of seniors from mandatory commons (and a discussion of a 45% refundability level), which I started. I think Mark and I have both learned a lot and the coming year looks hopeful.

Baker Snack Bar 1/81-1/82

The snack bar is presently worth approximately $600. This figure is an average value taken from inventories from the past year.

Last Spring a gumball machine was donated to the house by Wayne Seltzer. This year it can be found in third central (when it's up). Frank DiTaranto is our gumball chairman if anyone has any questions about the gumball machine they should be referred to him.

Last Spring Liz Snyder and I tried to do some can recycling. Unfortunately, we could not find a company close enough that would accept steel cans. We ended up separating the cans (Dr. Pepper and 7-up cans are made of aluminum). This process was long and tedious. We got a whole $12 for our efforts (which was given to the treasurer). We opted not to do it again. Next year a five cent deposit on cans will be coming into effect in Massachusetts. Five cents will be tacked onto the price of soda. If people want to return their cans, it will have to be done outside of the dorm since there isn't space to store these cans.

Last Spring the only major problem that occurred was an incident where the glass on the Pepsi refrigerator door was broken. This is why fireballs have not been stocked for the last year. The Pepsi and Dr. Pepper refrigerators were lent to us by those companies. We do not pay any rent for them, and we are very lucky to have them. They should be treated with care and not abused. We were very lucky that we weren't charged for the glass they replaced.

In the last year 1900 cases of soda were ordered. We stock Dr. Pepper, Coke, and Pepsi products.

The soda machine which was purchased in November of 1980 is now working fine. It is at least one-third paid off. Since the records of the soda machine, among other things that were in a little book, were lost by the summer snack bar manager, it is hard to say exactly how much of the $1000 we paid for the machine has come back to us in profits. At the present time I am filling it, and turning to other people in the event of problems which I cannot correct.

There are now two new closets for storing soda. Since I now have plenty of room in these closets, I gave my 4th central closet to the social chairpeople.

I have been helping Next House (represented by Mitch Tasman) set up soda machines of their own. He wanted to get this done before the Institute could put in their Coke machines.

If there is enough interest, I will look into ordering chips for the snack bar.

One thing that I'd like to look into is a separate bank account for the snack bar to be used by summer and IAP snack bar managers. I have found that there is too much money sitting around in the manager's room due to the treasurer's absence during these times. If there was a separate bank account, the money could be placed there, earning interest for the dorm. The money would be taken out and given to the treasurer when he/she returned.

If anyone has any questions about the snack bar or suggestions for improvement, please feel free to contact me.

ELECTIONS CHAIRMAN

This was a big year in the office of elections chairman. The first major occurrence was a recount of the judcom elections of February 1981. The recount changed the fourth member from Steve Math to Steve Eschenbach. This caused much concern in the house and a committee was formed to review the voting system in the house. The committee recommended that the present preferential voting system be retained, as it is the best way to represent the feelings of the voting populace, as long as people state their true order of preference. The second recommendation of the committee was to hold judcom member elections as a house-wide election with appropriate nominating and voting procedures. This second recommendation resulted in a constitutional amendment which was placed on the ballot in the September 1981 house election. At that election nine general assembly representatives were elected in a race that was composed entirely of write-in candidates. This term of office ended with the house-wide butterfly election in February 1982. There were not sufficient funds in the fall budget for food for the butterfly; an oversight which should not be made again, for fear of a riot. As a final suggestion, it would be better if the February house meeting were not scheduled for the Tuesday of either February election so that the individuals who agree to help count results would not be forced to miss the debate of the spring budget. This concludes the colorful report of the 1981 elections chairman; submitted with due respect to the house secretary,

Sincerely,

STATE OF THE LAUNDRY ADDRESS:

Repair expenses for this year were kept to a minimum thanks, in part, to an extra dryer motor purchased under the Croc Administration. Replacement of one dryer motor was the largest repair done. Other repairs, such as replacing switches, thermostats, dryer windows, and a vandalized dryer coin lock, were each relatively inexpensive. Above all, the policy of frugal spending under the Zankman Administration was firmly adhered to in the spirit of these "New Federalist" times.

RECOMMENDATIONS: The most glaring inadequacy in the laundry situation is the need for more washers and dryers. In considering larger quarters, it is felt that too much has been invested in the present laundry room to abandon it completely. It is recommended as a possible solution that the lounge behind the fireplace on the first floor be used as an annex to the laundry room. This room has acceptable ductwork for drainage, and is used for little more than a "land bridge" to the women's bathroom. Using stacking dryers, at least two washers and four dryers can be placed in this lounge. Negative aspects to this plan must be considered and discussed by Baker residents. Some of these include the large total expense and possible ensuing noise for the first floor residents to bear.

The Clienteam or other official-type representative group is urged to discuss the implimentation of this plan with the Institute. The InSTITUTE, I believe, may discourage this due to its reluctance to allow dryer exhaust to leave from a front window of Baker House. This may detract from Baker House's esthetic appeal as a campus showpiece. Other methods to vent exhaust may be infeasible.

SOCIOLOGICAL OBSERVATION: The substantial increase in gross income over recent years indicates that Baker residents are washing their clothes much more often than ever before. This may be accredited largely to the new freshman class, who probably keep themselves and their clothes much cleaner than the graduated seniors did. The personal image of the MIT student may indeed be changing.

Parking Chairman report 1981-82

Everything went very well this year, 27 residents ~~many~~ requested stickers and they all received one. ~~14~~ Fourteen were in Westgate, 10 in New Westgate and 3 in ~~Vassar St~~ the 243 ~~lot~~ Lot on Vassar St.

The fee is still 5 dollars for a sticker and students should be reminded to register their cars with CP's whether or not they want a parking sticker.

Vandalism is still a problem but I believe ~~that~~ it has not increased over the past year.

~~There have however been~~

I am aware of many ~~made~~ incidences of cars being ~~broken into~~ broken into (including my own) around campus but the MIT lots are generally safe.

Country Kitchen Report

Feb. 23, 1982

I assumed the position of Country Kitchen Manager in mid-October. Since that time:

- The C.K. has been thoroughly cleaned with the help of a few dedicated volunteers
- The garbage disposals have been fixed
- A new system ~~of~~^{for} reserving the Country Kitchen and its utensils has been initiated. Sign-outs are on a sheet outside my door and the keys are placed in the mailboxes. This allows me to have better control of the use of the Kitchen. Also, the utensils are in locked cupboards to reduce the amount of theft.
- Country Kitchen rules were distributed to every member of the House.

Report to the Secretary: Mr. Wayne M. Greene.

Re. The Baker Letter Progress Report for Fall 1981

total issues: 2 distributed September 26 and Nov. 17

total cost: $68.84 not the 21.48 reported in the budget

Circulation: Baker House +

Total Paid Subscriptions: 0

Recommendations to the Secretary:

Mr. Secretary, in my dealings with the people of Baker House, it has come to my attention that many people consider the B.L. (not Bob Lessik, although that may apply) to be trifling, purposeless (the phrase "Art for Art's sake" has been known to make occasional MIT students double over in laughter) and just another example of how the House is willing to pay for any silly expense. Maybe this will change now that you have (in your own words) "competent people" working on it.
~~In any case, you should -~~

The title of the person/people in charge of the B.L. should be changed to publisher or some such nonsense. The title "editor" is a true misnomer in this case and tends to confuse people.

SUCCESS

Many weeks have passed since that incident with J. Spencer. The crew has settled down into their abnormal mode's of living. Personality conflicts have not arisen yet—that is good. But lately there has been much concern about L'Rush. Many times since they left Earth he has been seen in the stellar observation bubble staring off into the unending cosmos listening intently to what ~~the~~ most consider bad music. The point that bothers his fellow crewmen is that his monthly blood sample contained lethal concentrations of a stimulant called "Valley Piss"...

...Am I good?

Out there in the pinpricks of light does life exist?—Look, there's the constellation Cygnus—the name sake of our spaceship.

Can the nine of us succeed at our mission?...

The sun rises over the lonely hills
Its first piercing rays strike.
Your eyes squint at its brilliance
The Earth resounds with silence
Shadows turn into brightness,
You laugh as your heart pounds its steady beat.
Many thoughts run through your head
Thinking of the latest triumphs
Family, friends, all applause.
The Earth doesn't seem to applaud...
Ah, but that is incorrect.

All around you the sounds of the trumpet flourish
Life awakens and the noise is excruciating.
Music, words, sounds; a beautiful mixture
You just stare and soak up the message.
Favorite songs and events pass in wordless ecstasy.
The moment seems to fade.
You blink you eyes
Silence now reigns divine.

The Message is clear:
Success lies not in events,
But in the feelings of the Soul.

Life does suck in its inevitable way.
Wood or metal? that is the question.
Must we submit to the whims of others?

Predestination--Can one really disprove anything if it is impossible to prove the disproof?

Time clicked on quite slowly for the nine aboard the Cygnus X-1, but on earth time raced by at incomprehensible rates (or so it seemed so). Brownie said he had walked his final round. Roy Weinstein no longer existed: the world was a better place.

10) Discussion of inviting the delts over for a happy hour, various coments went as follows: Wait till we see how the thing with Chi Phi goes, its better to invite individuals instead of an entire living group, happy hours are non-political and we cant and shouldn't make them political. The discussion is not decided and tabled.

11) An incident amoung other incidents were discussed concerning the abuses of the Msl by many goups, Musical Th. Guild used the Msl last Sat night made a lot of noise, and didn't get a chance to clean up since ghe desk closes at two. the Reiches consider the Msl as their living room-we should be considerate. Mike proposed a new set of requirements for use of the Msl.

1. Must have a Baker sponsor (This is not new)
2. A curfew at 1 AM will be instated with clean up by 2 AM.
3. Wiht Fri and Sat nights, a cleaning-maintenance deposit of $20 will be required.

Mike will also make it a point ~~him~~ to contact the Reiches about any use of the MSL in the ~~a~~ future (right Mike???)

Motion by (Chickie/Jim to approve these restrictions, passes 7-0-1.

12) The Secretary read the article in the bylaws concerning disposal of the ballots- in short they cannot be given out, and are destroyed withing 10 shhool days of the election. Kim C. then answered some trivial questions and the matter was left at that.

12') Motion by (Jim/chickie) to add to the agenda a request by RIP. passes 7-0-1.

Ross Pastel then discussed the how to study get together where he and a few others would train we pros in the art of tooling. In effect ross wanted money for food, but he was very cordial and nice about it so (Viv/Chickie) motioned to appropriate $50 out of VPIR Misc for the food, passes 7-0-1.

13) items for the next House meeting, Judcom ratifiaction, Parliamentarian ratification, also ratification of Client Team and COMCOM new officers and the Tudor selection committee ratifications. Discussion of Graduate Student Housing in Baker Policy.

14) Motion by (Neil/mike) to set the next House meeting on Monday March 15 at 9 in the dining hall, passes 7-0-1.

15) Motion by (Wayne/Neil) to hold the next Execcon meeting March 10, Wed. at 10:15 in the Home of first West renovations Turf., passes 7-0-1.

WHY NOT?

Consider the fact. Face up to your conscience. Listen to your inner voice. Why not?, it really doesn't take long and you get a ballon. A little over a week in duration its scheduled for. There is no excuse that's acceptable. You nerds can't be tooling all that time. A little less than an hour, you can spare that and help your fellow inhabitants on this single solitary oasis in the cosmos.

Now a multiple choice question:

Why should I not give blood?

- A) I've never seen my blood, therefore I have none to give.
- B) I'm a six nerd, I can't spare any time.
- C) I pull three all-nighters a week, half my blood is mountain dew.
- D) I am an incredible asshole, I won't give blood to spite the anti-abortion faction running the show.

Clearly it is intuitively obvious that none of the above are rational excuses. The only recourse one has is to give blood. Whether you are A, B, AB, or O, human society needs that life giving fluid (in addition to JD).

Only a small portion of your time and energy is requested. Imagine the high and satisfaction you will receive knowing that at sometime and at someplace a defenseless child's life will be saved, all because of YOU

THE DIFFICULTY

So the world didn't come to an end. The elections went on anyway. Feldstat had lied. Cursed be the weekend and that it brings.

O, that this too too solid flesh would melt,
The evil that men do lives after them;

A message came across the emptiness of space:

"Members of the Cygnus X1, be prepared to receive a very urgent message!"

"Shit," Spam blurted out, "Not this again."

"Why don't you shut up and listen", Oilman had just gotten back and was now psyched for the unknown.

"Crewmen of the Cygnus, in a very short time you will engage in third degree galactic war games with the Tarf Empire in the Rememberence Galazy #403!"

"What am I to do?" thought Caesar, his eyesight was lacking, he couldn't operate the Laser weaponry.

"I know!!" he was laughing quite heavily at the thought that permeated his brain.

"L'Rush, I have a mission for you."

"But Caesar, my eyesight is just as bad as yours, I can't fire the laser either."

Caesar was by now in all out laughter—he was going to get L'Rush back for certain remarks he had said in addition certain maritime missions L'Rush had partaken in and lead.

"L'Rush, you have been chosen to defend the purity of our empire. Do not let them score or our virginity will be gone forever..."

L'Rush had just suited up and was sitting on the bench in the Laser Firing Control Box when he heard:

"Go get them ACE..."

"But Taffyloni, I haven't typed up the

FRESHMAN ADVISORY COUNCIL

CAMBRIDGE, MASSACHUSETTS 02139

March 29, 1982

Dear lowly Freshman;

The Freshman Advisory Council has made an extensive study into the intimate lives of every one of you freshman. It is quite evident that massive depression has been plaguing you all. After much deliberation the Committee has come up with the following words of advice:

1. Dont ever let any upperclassman fool you, Life does really suck at M.I.T.
2. Given the choice between a commons dinner and a 5.42 problem set, take a cold shower.
3. Studies have shown that sheep ^{are} detrimental to your performance.

The list could go on...

All is never lost. But in this case with the Class of 1985, all is lost. The Freshman Advisory Council in conjunction with the Student Center Committee have cancelled the Ramones and Spring Weekend and on Friday April 23, but at 9:00 Pm there will be a Jim Jones Memorial KoolAid Punch Blast in Killian Court. Every freshman is required to attend by order of Paul Gray.

Note:: Positive ID is NOT required.

And remember the phrase to live by:

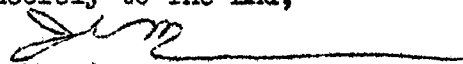

"Life sucks and then you die...

if your lucky!"

And you are the lucky ones!!!!

Enjoy yourselves.

Sincerely to The End,

THE LONG DISTANCE DEDICATION:
"WHY DONT WE DO IT IN THE ROAD?"

Lifelessness, floating still like pools of amber dreams, all asleep. What, a wire hanger now? The crew of the Cygnus sat quietly as their craft raced through the steller intermedium. All were rested, life began anew with the change in space time that happened in the continuum. They were prepared for anything. But...

Can all the crew fathom what lay ahead?

Rome burned as one Caesar stood by, will our Caesar do the same? The future of the cygnus seemed as though the lifegiving dew of life was transparent with...

Mounts of white matter. All fluffy yet viscous. The crew was temporarily headed by Hippie Landlubber. Our beloved Caesar was busy moving furniture. The Gyms sailed further onward through the unknown. House upon the hill. Come on baby run with me. All were restless. Rooster quite clearly had enough of this shit, she wanted some real food. Hippie being the kind of commander he was, bowed to the pressure and stopped the Gyms at the closest planet. The eight beamed down to the planet using their matter-energy transporter they got out a box of Captain Crunch. Tension immediately was present once they arrived. Nobody had ever encountered the lizard King before, but Hippie could do anything: he sent Ollman to investigate the housing structure that lay ahead. She walked up the door of the building and looked back toward her fellow crewmates. They all sternly folded their arms and motioned for her to press onward, after all she wanted the job.

She slowly turned the door handle, so slowly in fact that time seemed to stand still. She then immediately opened the door against all odds of survival to see, yes you've got it, left foot on Mother, the famous lady to which everybody has raised a mug to. Its going to be a horror story. They were sitting in the room, when a bird like object through the window. It was carrying a coconut, by L'Rush's recollection it was a European Swallow. Fred Feinberg's mother who wasn't invited ate it a whole. She immediately barfed zucchini. It was really strange, since she hadn't eaten any in 2 weeks. 0000000000000h. Said who. Oh they all screamed as a sheep was suddenly seen. The wheep's name was Basil. Oh my God, screamed Silvester, the shhep hadn't eaten any zucchini either. Quick, drop the Ouji Board, but it was too late.

Now I understand. Warning, Warning, the spirit finally showed up. But bread-crumbs were not enough to quell the spirits thirst for vengeance. Which way is it to east Vassalboro. The mission had been going well for the Cygnus. They had killed J. Spencer, managed to partake in war games without losing their lives or pride, and they even got to eat with Jeff Lofton's mother. But then there was big bird. Yes you heard me type it—BIG BIRD. This was truly an inferior life form. Roy Weinstein had nothing on this slime. Picture the RED. Everybody new his kind. The McKenna of the future, HELL NO We wont vote. He was afraid of authority, "Don't be afraid of the man, beat his brain in", "Why dont you shut your face, I am the boss when it comes to the cold white." Boy I really do hate Sesame Street and Big Bird.

WHY DO WE CARE?

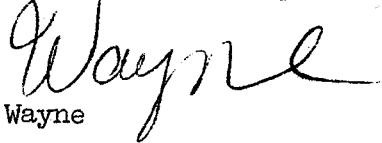

That is the question of the day. I might just flame about this for about a whole page but I won't. So now the water is all gone. Life continues onward. But the question still remains: Does anybody really know what time it is? But then again, do I really care? I don't have any answers to these questions since today is either tuesday or wednesday, I can't tell the difference, especially if today is sunday. Well anyway, I think I am rambling on, you probably believe the same in addition I suggest that you all do whatever you want. The world is yours for the asking, or was it taking, I tell you. Why can't the world ever be good. Even I believe at times that man still has not understood the world. Golda who?

I hope that in the future I will do a better job at these stories since today is a good day. I seriously do wish than mankind will preserve themselves and that unions be abolished. But in the meanwhile here is the

I know that I am a faggot, but I couldn't make anything funny up, so I'll just tell you what's going on—take as many liberties with it as you want.

The party (Spring Weekend) Amherst Alley right outside the frats (who have there own parties going on inside)—its all open to everybody. We've (Dormcon twitts) got 2 maybe 3 bands, munchies, and 20 kegs to finish off. Anybody who wants to is welcome to get laid, help set up, pour piss water, and other shit like that—things will be starting about 8:30 or 9, you know the story about parties, may be later. Free Beer for the masses, I did promise you all that and the party is real close to DEKE if you want to ~~steal~~ borrow a mug or some other ~~valuable~~ item. People who are interested, I really don't know why, can tell me or Kletsky or Frank—were all incredible gay homosexuals, pourers are really needed for the ~~valuable~~ beer. If the weather is as big an asshole as I am, we'll be inside the Burton Dining Hall. Thats about it—just tell everyone to come, uh huh, and help out.

Hey! Like what the fuck it is man? I get this picture of a funny looking ant-eater licking the Dumboears of some happy face with a Spanish question mark for a nose and I'm supposed to know what it is? Well, let me tell you, some pretty unusual things be happenin' around de dorm. We got 1.) a Dormcon President who be talking like Idi Amin, mun. 2.) A president whose jokes are still so obscure that we have to call in a one-balled Moravian monk to translate them. 3.) a VPFS is fine standing on all three counts. That is to say (1) Lazy, (2) Fucking ? (3) Slob! 4.) a secretary sho takes random sentences and juxtaposes them in fashion such that sense he never almost makes. Why, there are even aliases. You know-bogus names to protest the innocents (and the rest of us who have no sense at all). Take Roy for example, please? Contract talk? There's even one guy who's trying to break every bone in his body-one at a time And last but not lease a new breed of vegetable: "a senior." His roots are deep in procrastination. All kinds of vexations plague it. You know: THE THESIS, the job rejections, the grad school rejections, the bill its parents just sent for twenty-one years of room and board. Ahh, it's the little things in life that make you want to whistle a happy tune. Hint: try "Life's a piece of shit when you look at it. Life's a laugh (har-har) and Death's a joke it's true (i.e. "Life sucks, then you die" and clause 69 "only if you're lucky") But the one thing that really makes me crap in my own pants is:

SCREWED IN THE END

He had thought he had lived through it all. Things could not have gotten worse. Joe Freshman had lived in Baker for almost a year. "The R/O thing that I had received during the summer did not even tell the truth about this shithole called Baker." He and his classmates truly knew life was a bummer. First there was Commons, then there was Frank as Social Chairman. Many times at the Baker parties cries were heard: "I can't take it anymore. I just can stand it,"—there was not a wench in the dining hall. Joe Freshman was a mellow dude though. But at times he let the contagious disease that plagued all men at MIT take hold. Right hand rule or not, there was athletics, at least he didn't eat quiche. But then came the Holiday Party, Joe really wanted to take a sheep, but Hot Cat, his best friend convinced him that taking a sheep to dinner would present a problem—they might serve lamb chops. Life was really a bummer, but sleep was Joe's only last hope: at least his dreams were free from distress, only vision of home, and socket wrenches. But then one day Joe Freshman had the most incredible dream.....

It was a Saturday night during Spring Weekend, things were doing just great. Joe had a lot to look forward to. He was not failing any subjects, not even 6.008. Tomorrow he and the other freshman guys were going to play softball, the only thing in life that kept them going. But anyway, there he was at the party in Burton Dining Hall. Joe had asked five chicks to dance, two were gay, but one of the straights did dance with him, that was better than his batting average in softball, or even at Baker Parties. While dancing he let it all loose.....but then the vision of all that fun had faded and Joe was back at the Baker Lobby, "What are all these people looking at, holy shit!!, the room assignments were out." Joe pushed to the front of the heaving wretched mass, four sophomores had passed out, life was sure tough with a class of 105. Joe finally got to see the square slab of paper that many called the devils fix. But all through the year, Joe had faith that Eric, Skam and Lou were not going to screw him, how could they, they were supposed to be good people. Someone screamed, Joe feverishly thought, that chick screamed because she got a back double and she was a senior, Oh God. For some reason Joe checked the Upper floors first and saw that some freshman were still even the quads, he almost lost all hope. Some drunken sophomore from first west then kicked his feet from out him. Joe had never felt pain like that before, then he was trampled as even more people rushed to see their assignments. At this point, all bloody and full of remorse, Joe heard some one yell: "Joe, I found your room your in 146, maybe his mind was going, "Yes Joe Freshman 146." He could not believe it. Joe crawled out from under the pile, he had had enough. His face was bloody and the alcohol had just faded off. He belined straight for the Green building. Once on top of the largest building at MIT, he looked at the lights of Boston, the Charles was as smooth as a newly polished car hood, could he really just, he thought of all his experiences at MIT and Baker and then he whispered his last words: "I do this for a better life..". With all the strength he could muster he threw himself over the top of the ledge. There was no turning back. All he could remember was the blackness, the cold blackness. Then intense searing heat, all was red. "Maybe I'm dead" Joe spurted in his sleep. "Now then," it was the image of Paul Gray carrying a pitchfork talking, "of course your dead, you in the great lobby 10 of Hell, and here is your complimentary copy of the Joe Freshman awoke from his dream in a cold sweat. Looking around his decrepit disarray of a room things began to go blurry and his head hurt more than he had ever felt it before.

"Oh Shit," he thought to himself, "I knew I should have done those shots last night!" Joe immediately rolled over as a stomach spasm took hold of his body. He fell right on his roommate. (He slept, Joe that is, in an upper bunk). Joe's roommate, Stan the man just rolled over and began to reach for his HWA?. Joe immediately got out of Stan's bed—he had always had his doubt about him—those really funnylooking friends—those stray evenings away with the Fleishmans. Now his was sure.

"Never again, I will never again drink that much!" Joe then went over to the refrigerator and wiped four big suckers from the door handle. He was well accustomed to the filth that his roommate made him bear. Joe with his eyes half closed and barely staying ~~awake~~, reached for a Molson and guzzled the bottle down with astounding speed. Now he felt better.

"Where the hell was I after that great party last night." (Neil was now Social Chairman. "I couldn't have been so wasted as to not remember where I had been, I do remember something about the Green building and Paul Gray, but it just isn't there.

At this point Joe looked straight into the eyes of his favorite roach—Bill and realized that he had left the Baker party and had gone to BU in search of some benches.

"Now I remember, almost. I went to see Sarah at BU when I was met by this outstanding looking chicken. She had the most delicious looking red lips and a body that created harmonic oscillations in any man. I didn't know her name, but it was love at first sight. There was thing that was wrong though, Joe noticed that she was holding the....

CANT THOSE SENIORS EVER STOP?

Joe Freshman had thought he had seen it all at MIT and BAKER. But then there was the awards at the May House Meeting. The actual awards themselves were quite good. Joe had thought that Judy was an awesome prize for that depraved friend of his.

"You know Flousy," Joe was talking to one of the sophomore chicks on his floor, "I really think that three people at the meeting made total assholes of themselves!"

Joe was talking about Ed Maxwell, Bill Skamarock and of course Frank DiTormento. Take Ed for example, It was intuitively obvious that he was missing his right cerebral cortex. No wonder his left hand never worked during those long night he spent alone. Ohhhh. And then there was the Skajm. He should have been awarded the Arnie Burke "I wish I could grow a mustache before graduation" award. And last and least there is Frank DITORMENTO (not to be confused with Dr. Demento). Frank had consumed enough alcohol to last him maybe 2 hours at one his parties first semester. Not only was he so drunk out of his pants, he did not even realize that 4 different guys had kissed him during the awards. I have never seen his slide rule more prominently during the meeting. And of course remember: Frank enjoys Cheap SEX. What a guy!

"But all in all, I really did enjoy myself that evening", Joe now rolled over in bed and kissed her goodnight, and walked out of the room carrying the

AND NOW ... FROM OUR ATHLETIC CHAIRMAN:

BAKER HOUSE ATHLETIC POLICIES

1. Any team with a closed roster will pay the $20 for any forfeits they have. A team is considered closed when it is given to me as a complete list that I cannot add to. Therefore, preformed teams who allow additions will not fall under this category.
2. Any team caught with a ringer (a person not on the roster) will pay the $30 ineligible player fine. If there is going to be a problem with a certain game, let me or the manager know a day or two before the game. If the game cannot be rescheduled (and is an automatic loss) at least we won't be fined.
3. Room 627 is the official Ex-Athletic Chairman's room.
4. Every captain is responsible to let every player on the team know at least once when all of the games are. I can reimburse (within reason) captains who pay to get schedules copied. If you feel that you cannot keep a team informed of games and make sure that there will be enough people to play, don't agree to be a captain. NOTE: There should always be a current schedule for all sports on the athletic board!
5. All athletic equipment is to be returned to the desk after each time that it is used, not at the end of the season. Since ID cards cannot be left at the desk for equipment, we are trying to come up with a system to better keep track of the equipment. (and prevent full season signouts)
6. I would prefer that people sign up in groups as opposed to submitting a complete roster. My job is a lot easier if I get no closed teams at all.. It also helps the Freshman to meet people if they're put on a teams with little groups of friends as opposed to one big group.
7. Beginning in the fall, no one will be put on a roster unless that person signs up on the athletic board. By signing up on the board, I will know that you want to play. It also is easier to get freshman to sign up if there are a lot of names.

ATTENTION: This is an important communique from the Secretary-General of the United Nations! Let all inhabitants of the planet earth be wary of the facts. On August 25, 1978, the world astronomers at the Mount Palomar Observatory noted a strange blue jet of matter erupting from Jupiter. Ulla! Further investigation since then has shown that a hostile space craft was launched from Jupiter on that fateful day.

Just yesterday the intelligent living beings aboard those space crafts spoke to an emergency session of the General Assembly of the United Nations. The beings made many demands upon we earthmen. For a time the negotiations were so grave that the US and the USSR almost decided to commit all nuclear weapons to earthly destruction so that man would go down proud. But a settlement was finally reached:

In U. N. Resolution 24563-A-5/13/83, the member nations of the General Assembly have overwhelmingly decided to sacrifice the Senior of Baker House Dormitory at M.I.T. to the beings from Jupiter. -A small price to pay for the lives of over four billion low lives. But if I may say goodbye, The Class of 1982 at Baker House has been an inspiration to us all. Some were cool people, some were assholes, but all in all, Baker and the whole community we call M.I.T. will never see such a great bunch of men and women as they in the Class of 1982 at Baker.

Farewell, and may you prosper on in Jupiter...

Kurt Wayneheim, Secretary-General of the United Nations...

With one down and one to go...

Execon Meeting

5/12/82

Lobby at 10PM

Meeting was called to order by Frank at 10:09, Michelle was late by 2 minutes.

Announcements:

Jim-Last weekend, TDC egged some rooms on the west side. They're going to reimburse us for the damage provided we stop throwing stuff at them. So in order to avoid a war, don't throw anything at TDC. (The last "war" we got into involved Deans and was a mess.

Neil-Happy Hour this Friday on the roof.

Chickie, Congrats to people who got awards, summer softball, give me 6 big ones and you can play.

Frank-Commends all of Execon for a fine job done.

Agenda:

1. Motion by (Chickie/Neil) to approve the minutes from the House meeting of 5/5, passes
2. Motion by (Vivian/Chickie) to approve the minutes of Execon 5/6/82, passes 8-0-1.

ADJOURN much too late.

ELLI!

"Do not touch your typewriter. There is nothing wrong with your keys.
We are in control. You have entered the Twilight Zone."
"Oh no! I knew if I tried to do a Dirt Bag's job for another Dirt Bag something was bound to go wrong. What can I do now."
"There is nothing you can do. You will be swept into another time - - another dimension. There you will be changed into another sick sitcom writer. You will join the ranks of the mentally dismantled. You are under our control."
"NO! I won't let it happen. There must be something. I Know! I'll just pull . . ."
"There is noth . . ."

Due to an excessive quantity of flaming, today's story (drug inspired strafing if you prefer), has been preempted.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

1) Mike Landmeier has resigned as Vice President for Facilities and Services effective today. Mike is to be thanked for his service to the House last term. Anew VPFS will be elected on Oct. 5 to finish the term.

A WORLD OF STRANGE FACES

Silence.

Silence.

Then, abruptly intense sight, sound, smell, taste and smell. The world awoke quite harshly for Clarence Bond. He was very quietly sleeping in the 6.001 lecture the registrar made him take when all of a sudden he was awoken by the most gruesome circumstances: three guys from SIPB-smelling like...; looking like...:you know the type. Well they had Clarence in a bind: two of the gnurds were holding him down while the other was inserting a remote terminal hookup lead into his left ear while at the same time stuffing Walker entrees into his right nostril. Clarence was screaming at the top of his lungs but not one course 6 fellow gnurd raised a hand, none even took a look at the horrible torture that Clarence was undergoing. They just stared and copied the notes like a bunch of mindless eggbeaters. Unable to take anymore of the torture, Clarence pulled a bar of Ivory Soap out of his back pocket and began to rub the bar against the SIPB Scum, within a second they disappeared leaving their clothes without corporeal accompaniment. Clarence ran from the lecture hall knocking down the instructure.

Running and running, Clarence could not escape. His mission was priority one. Finally he slowed down and noticed a strange face around the crowd. It was a clean cut guy who seemed to know what he was at MIT for. In his back pocket, Clarence noted a paperback book titled: The world according to Coree. Strange indeed.

"Excuse me, What is your name", Clarence asked feeling a compulsion to know.

"Hi, my name is Tech McTool, whats yours?"

"Mine is Clarence Bond, glad to make your acquaintance"

"You know, Clarence, no matter how hard you try, things just get worse and worse!"

"Tech, you are absolutely right, for example look at this piece of paper on the floor, every time it gets worse and worse..., that secretary is indeed on terminal drugs..."

NEVER CAN WILL

Page after page of utterly useless material. Clarence was reading for one of his supposedly interesting classes. Sleep tried to steal his intellect but the numerous particulates of caffinated matter were doing their job. Song after song and nothing has changed. Clarence got out of his chair and walked out of his room toward the bathroom.

The evening was unlike any of the rest. The world seemed alive with the thunderous blasts and blinding strokes of light. It seemed as if some unknown presence was trying to tell the people of Earth something. Clarence was the only poor sould in Baker awake at this hour. Clarence, after finishing his break, started to stride back to his room when the most incredible accurance happened.

A simultaneous flash of light and a deafening howl of sound invaded Clarence's intellect. Right before his eyes was an incredible apparition:

A formless mass of transparent mass. Clarence was scared out of his witts, At first it seemed to be truly a hallucination but it seemed to have an intelligence. Suddenly intense pain...Clarence's head was being crushed under the force that this entity was exerting on his brain. Clarence knew at once that the being was trying to communicate something to him, but his own resistance was creating the pain he was feeling. He tried to settle down and allow the being to enter his mind...

And then the message appeared in a torrendus blast:

The infliction of intense uneddng pain is what makes life so intriguing...

Clarence was released from the aliens hold, but the message made no sense to him: pleasure and the fulfillment of deep hidden desires was Clarences goal in life. Clarence just shrugged off the message realizing that this makes absolutely no sense at all except for the...

ARE WE REALLY TO BLAME?

Clarence rushed on past the countless gnurds on the way to their unending classes. For the first time while he was here, Clarence had finally figured out how to accomplish his mission at MIT and escape this horrible inferno. He passed by building 56 as he observed the many researchers manipulating life itself. He pondered the future, what will life be like? Will these biologists changed what evolution had taken zillions of years to perfect. Is mankind ready for these interventions into what rightfully is the domain of some unnameless prescence. Clarence then passed on by the Chem E building eyeing what appeared to be a physical plant employee dumping some liquids down a sink (probably some tunguetwisting poisoness chemical), Clarence thought that later today, some 3 to 4 scullers would probably from the exposure. Why can't man protect what he was graciously given.

On entering the Medical buildings, Clarence bolted up to the drug supply room and immediately seized one of those super-super depressants. It would gaurentee a painless death quite quickly. Clarence thought for a moment pondering the would he would be living without. Vice, hunger, and pain; all self inflicted upon our selves the human race. Clarence had made the final decision as he slipped the hypodermic needle into his arm...he plunged the barrell and immediately felt relieved. As sleep overtook his mind he remembered the last words of that secretary when he died by his own hand. I Am I lucky Clarence thought. Death was imminent in about 2 or 3 seconds but these last ticks of Clarence's watch were the longest in his life. He looked out of the window toward the Domes and saw the light, the intense light. He was drawn into its blinding whiteness, regretting nothing except the

THE QUESTIONARE

Now that all Bakerites have experienced a "Baker Election", I as the guardian of the Secretariat and the grand constitution of Baker would ask you cooperation, and answer some questions that I propose below. (Please fill out and put in ~~my~~ box 6470. Thanks for your support.

1. What is your perception of Execon?
2. Do you think elections really matter in the grand scheme of things?
3. If you had a chance to change the political structure of Baker House, what would you do?

Thanks again

AND NOW A MESSAGE FROM THE CHAIRMAN OF THE HOUSE JUDICIAL COMMITTEE:

Recently, there has been increasing damage to the Baker House pinball and video machines. While an occasional shove or bump is expected, violent kicking, hitting, and smashing of the machines is uncalled for.

These machines are an important source of revenue for the house. If they are not better cared for, they will be removed without question. That would cost Baker House more than $6000 a year in lost revenue. That means less money for parties, less money for athletic equipment, and less money for anything else we want to do. Moreover, once the machines are removed, there's no hope of getting them back since Baker House would be blacklisted.

Obviously not everyone trashes the pinball and video games. But if you see someone else doing it, remember that it's costing you money so get them to stop. (If you don't want to get involved, tell someone on Judcom.) If you are one of the ones destroying the machines, be warned that you will be fined for any damages you cause.

Right now we are dangerously close to losing the machines. The only way we can keep them is if we ensure their safety. That means everyone in the dorm putting pressure on those doing the damage. Peer pressure is the only effective way to protect the machines and keep Baker House $6000 richer.

Jim Schumacher-Chairman of the Baker House
Judicial Committee

PROPOSED STORAGE POLICY

TRUNK ROOM:

The trunk room manager is instructed to:

1. Establish a policy procedure to limit trunk room storage to 1 year after the users departure from Baker House.
2. Grant exceptions to the above in the case of a) Coop or VI-A students (1.5 Yrs)
b) all other cases judged necessary by the manager.
3. Any items stored in violation of the above policy shall come into ownership of the House and be auctioned off with the proceeds going to the general House fund.

BIKE ROOM:

1. Bicycles may be stored by a current Baker resident only.
2. Each and every bicycle shall be registered with the Athletic Chairperson before it may be stored on an annual basis.
3. Bicycles that have not been registered or that are in violation of policies 1 or 2 shall come into ownership of the House and shall be auctioned off with the proceeds of the auction going into the general House fund.

REFRIGERATORS, LOFTS, LUMBER, SHELVING, ETC.:

1. The above material shall be stored in an orderly and neat manner, in designated areas, under the supervision of the House manager and the VPFS.
2. The above storage shall be permitted only during the period between the tenth (10th) day preceeding the spring term finals period and the 10th day after the Registration Day for the fall term.
3. Policies 1 and 2 in no way guarantee space for such storage.

ROOM FURNITURE:

Beginning with the year 1982-84, the storage of room furniture shall be subject to the following:

1. Only the bed frame, bed drawers, and bed springs may be stored in the basement. Bed slats and end boards along with the front double partitions, desks, and miscellaneous flat lumber fittings may NOT be stored in the basement.
2. No giraffe or couch shall be removed from any room except where the items will be used in another resident's room.
3. The storage of the above permissible furniture shall be subject to any rules decided on by the house and its agencies. The recording of such storage in items 1 and 2 may be required if deemed necessary. Specifically, the areas used for storage and the amount of storage may be limited.

HALLS:

1. All furniture to be stored shall be removed directly from the rooms to the basement. This furniture shall not be left in the halls under any circumstances.
2. All personal belongings shall be stored in rooms in the trunk room or other approved areas. Those belongings shall be removed from the halls immediately upon moving in.

THE COINCIDENCE

After their spout with the unknown traveler, Seth and Stacy continued on their way to Elmsford. It was getting dark and they decided to stop and get some sleep. Stacy started a fire while Seth looked for some food. The night was piercingly cold. It seemed as if your breath would become a solid if it was a bit colder.

A while later Seth returned and they both snuggled up next to the fire and fell asleep in each other's arms. Hours passed by and they did not stir. Nature had taken a new course and the sun rose to find the two lovers in the midsts of another human being. As Seth awoke he immediately noticed the greasy person who had also sought out their fire for warmth. Seth got to his feet waking Stacy up and motioning her to stay back. He woke up the sniveling person to notice that the facial features were ghastly distorted. Vaguely he realized that the man in front of his eyes was a former professor of his back there when he was a gnuerd at the Tech. Visions of all night tooling were immediately brought to mind.

The professor woke up to Seth's prodding and immediatly started the last lecture of his life....

"Listen closely, what I have to say is absolutely necessary for your survival. Take this and....

The professor winced in pain and fell over with his last breath. Seth was horrified to find a dagger in the prof's back. But in his hand was a part of a strange device. It seemed to be similar to the one that the unknown traveler had given him. He gave the piece to Stacy and proceeded to bury his long lost professore. In the professors wallet was the message: "The world is doomed, you must save this civilization-I tried but they were too strong, too powerful, too overwhelming..". Seth said a couple of words about the professor and then he and Stacy left carrying his message, they were going to avenge his death, afterall, their first hint was the fact that the message was written on the back of the..

They both slept soundly under the warm covers. Stacy and Seth had finally reached Elmsford. They were put up by a long standing friend of Seth's. But all throughout the town was danger for the two. The new republic that controlled the world nowadays had stationed almost 5 battalions of men here. Only Seth and Stacy realized why so many armed men were waiting in Elmsford. They were looking for the two of them. Of course Seth's friend Robert did not know that they were fugitives. The sun rose to find the lovers awake and smiling. Stacy kissed Seth and thanked him for their wonderful life. There was a bit of sarcasm in her voice, but Seth being the true gentleman that he was, just smiled and acknowledged her best intentions.

"You know Seth, if it wasn't for you I would probably be having an incredibly board life, and I love you for making out existence quite interesting to say the least." Seth just smiled and kissed his loving wife. Suddenly there was a large and loud bang on the House's door. Both immediately jumped out of bed and got ready to flee through the underground tunnel.

...It was too late. The Republic's guards kicked in the door and 30 armed soldiers stood face to face with Stacy, Seth and their hosts Robert his wife and kids. The soldier who was evidently in charge brushed Robert aside amid his pleas of innocence. The guard stood face to face with Seth, stared him in the eye and handed him the...

DISCOVERY

Seth stood face to face with the agents of his own downfall. Life at that very second seemed useless to Seth. He was finally caught off his guard. For one second he let the feeling of the heart obey whatever whim he had. Seth was about to throw in the towel and concede death at the hands of the republic's guards.

While all of these thoughts were going through Seth's mind in a microsecond, Stacy moved toward their bed very slowly while Seth just stared back at the guard. Then suddenly Seth realized what Stacy was doing. Just underneath the pillow was that red box-the last bastion of safety that they both held on to. Only Stacy and Seth knew the great power that they held in their possession. Stacy grabbed the Red Box and lurched toward the guards yelling for Rich and his family, the host of Stacy's and Seth's stay to close their eyes and not look. She deftly for the first time ever opened the Box the way Seth had taught her. The guards immediately started yelping. They could not take their eyes off the piercing light. It seemed as if the light was cutting through their brain material. The whelps turned into ear chilling screams as Seth kept saying over and over again for Stacy and Rich and his family to keep their eyes closed or they will die.

After about 2 or 3 minutes the screaming stopped and Seth took a peak at the scene. He had never seen the awesome power of the Box in a real life situation, only in the laboratory back at the company. He was totally surprised to notice that all of the guards lay before him as children. Their army cloths draped loosely over the childish bodies. But they were not children, they were deformed shapeless creatures. As time passed on Seth finally allowed the others to open their eyes. Before them was an incredible scene. In one piercing ray of light heaven seemed to withdraw all of the life out of the now formless guards. All present were stupified, even Seth, but he did not seem to admit it.

"Seth, we must all leave this place, even Rich's family, I just have this feeling...". Seth thought for a moment and then sniffed the air. Something was different. In the lab the Red Box did not act this way. There was a strange sense of lingering death. Then it finally hit him... He grabbed Stacy and led the who group out of the house. Just after they stepped out of the doorway, Seth realized that they left the Box back inside. Seth quickly ran inside to retrieve it realizing that he might be tempting death. He stood before the box to notice that next to it lie the ...

PUSHING ONWARD

Seth and Stacy immediately started on their journey onward. Pushing on for many days and weeks their life fervor was steadily decreasing. Stacy consistently asked for their destination. Seth constantly kept his mouth quiet. Little did Stacy know that Seth did not even know where they were going. He just pushed onward being guided by some incredible force. It was like being drawn into a black hole. After 40 days Stacy and Seth finally gave up. Stacy had refused to go further and Seth had given up all hope-there was no destination-no predestination.

They had not met a single person on their journey. But suddenly a playful 6-year old ran by yelling at someone behind him. Within a few seconds, another older child ran by. They seemed not to even notice the two adults in their midsts. Stacy and Seth immediately chased after them and finally caught up. Seth asked the older child where their home was.

"It's over there, We'll take you to our father, he has been expecting you.". Seth was astounded at the child's remark. Stacy and Seth walked arm in arm as they followed the two children. At last a town appeared in the distance. Seth began to get the feeling that there in the distance was their destination. Stacy felt the same feeling. This little hamlet in the wilderness would be their home, their base where they could regain control of the earth from the barbarians. Upon entering the gates of the village, a storekeeper selling books congratulated Seth upon surviving the wilderness and then handed him the...

THE MEETING (Not exeecon...)

Stacy and Seth were extreme glad to finally have reached their destination. As their walker the the central courtyard of the village they began to notice the liveliness and extreme happiness of the villagers. It seemed that even in the midsts of the end of the earth as they knew it, these people seemed to be glad that they were alive. Seth and Stacy's spirits were picked up tremendously by this change in mood. The children finally arrived a was appeared to be the may or this hamlet, their ~~XXXXXX~~ father.

Seth was agast when he saw who the leader of these people were... His brother Donald. He thought he had died in the night of the burning when most everybody was killed. Seth could not believe was he was. He immediately ran over and hugged this man-his brother. Stacy delayed for a second and then realized the great happiness that was occurring. All three hugged each other and then Don's wife, ~~XXX~~ Rose. There was much merrymnt and then Seth stepped back for a second and looked the two children and then looked to his brother seeking an explanation. Seth and ~~XXXXX~~ Stacy realized that Don did not have any children.

"They were two orphans we found that terrible night, so I adopted them Seth."

"I really like them Don". The four adults and the two children went ~~inside~~ inside and rejoiced on this great happening. Seth slowly began to realize the meaning of all of this. His brother Don was a wizard in almost anything necessary for his existance. He would help him beat the Republic down. The night grew late and Sarah and Don left Stacy and Seth in front of the fire by themselves as the night grew cold. All was incredibly happy for the whole family. In the shadows of the fire, a child was conceived, Seth and Stacy's first born male. Asleep, the two lovers dreamed unendless thought of ~~happy~~ beauty and love, but in Seth's last dream before the sunrise, he saw in the midsts of a great fiery hell the

ORGANIZATION

About a month has passed since Seth and Stacy greeted the rest of their family. (I apologize for the lack of typographical clarity in the last episode) So now there will be a recap. Seth and Stacy have met Seth's brother Don and his wife Sarah. Don is the leader of the town of rebels...

"But there must be a way we can defeat them. We at least have the power behind us Seth," Don was discussing their game plan.

"We can't rush into things, We must plan our revenge and prepare for both the best possible outcome and the worst, my brother". Seth was beginning to make his brother realize the import of their proposed counterrevolution.

For one thing, Seth realized that his and Stacy's search had not been completed. He was sure that this town of his brother's was going to be their base, but he had not ~~yet~~ yet discovered the magic of the two interlocking pieces that he and Stacy had acquired on their trip to Elmsford. One thing was sure though, the two pieces seemed to be part of a greater whole. Perhaps this object would seed the plants of the republic's downfall. Meanwhile, Seth had decided to sit quietly and meditate on their plan of action. He and Stacy had bought a house on loan from his brother and he had taken up work making chemicals and processing foodstuffs for storage. He also worked on supplying more power for the town's growing need. After all, if this town was to be the home base of a massive counterrevolution, they had to get ready.

The months passed and Seth still did not figure out the magic of the interlocking pieces: there must be a secret. During the passing of these months Stacy's abdomen swelled with refreshing consequences. Stacy was the happiest she had ever been. Yet she felt the frustration that Seth was going through. Then one balmy night Stacy gave birth to a magnificent baby boy that they named Daniel after Stacy's dead great grandmother. Seth beamed as he saw his firstborn boy, but something was the matter, Seth bent forward to notice that his son Daniel was holding the...

THE SIGN

The Hamlet was getting ready for the Republics attack. Everybody was working. Some were storing food, others were making ammunition. Still others were conducting research on the riddle of the two interlocking pieces that Seth and Stacy had managed to find. The red box, the weapon that Seth utilized to escape from the Republics guards no longer held any power for the rebels. Seth was extremely puzzled by this fact. To him it was a sign that the people who are helping him to overcome the evil that invaded this world must work harder on the mystery of the interlocking pieces.

Stacy spent most of her time caring for Daniel their son. Seth just loved his baby son. Daniel looked just like him, He was going to teach him to be a wise and strong man, a leader of many.

Suddenly, around lunch, Seth noticed that there was a great commotion in the central square of the hamlet. He raced with all his speed to the square to find a throng of onlookers crowded around a visitor to the rebel town. Seth pushed his way to the center of the crowd to find an old man, about 70 years old with stark white hair and a matching 2 foot long beard. The minute Seth showed up, the visitor noticed him.

"I have come to teach you, the leader of these people", the visitor said as the massive group of people grew silent.

"I have come to help you" the secret of this reality, by which you may conquer the Republic if you wish, but the choice is up to you—Seth", Seth was dumfounded. His mind raced on through all the history he could fathom. Somehow, his intellect told him that this old man was a person who commanded great power, and had come from the past.

"Wise man, What is your name?", Seth asked as he shook the visitor's hand

"I have many names in many times, but you all shall call me Moltic, keeper of good". Seth then welcomed Moltic, the keeper of the good to his home, but noticed that the old man was carrying the...

5. was tabled, 6. a discussion insued about Alummai at Cocktail parties, any suggestions

Life pressed on for the small Hamlet. Many times throughout the following weeks the Republic sent spy planes over the town to seek out any rebel activities. Seth began to organize the Rebel forces, they began to build armies and to store ammunition for the upcoming war. Seth was to be the fearless leader of the Hamlet and of the combined rebel forces.

All through this time, Moltic, the visitor from beyond began his sessions with Seth. Since Moltic was a night creature, Seth had to stay up nights to seek his wisdom and instruction.

"Seth, why do you think the red box doesn't work anymore?" Moltic asked while Seth fidgeted in his seat. Seth knew the answer, but could not admit it to himself.

"You know, Seth, until you admit it life on earth is ~~and~~ doomed."

"But wise Moltic, its too painful to remember"

"You must remember and admit it to your self"...

It seemed as if Seth did not want to remember that cold night while he and Stacy were searching for the Hamlet they now reside in. In fact, it was the night just before they found the two children of his brothers. And then, intense pain welled up from within Seths heart. His loving wife was asleep, he went in search of some more firewood. And then on that faithfulnight Seth came upon a lone man in the wilderness and killed him. Seth honastly thought that he was their enemy, but he now realized that he was mistake. Just as Seth remembered the face on the man-- it was Moltic's face. Seth turned around to Moltic...

"Was it you that I, I killed?"

"Yes it was me Seth, but you did not kill me, it was only a test, and you failed. We were just testing you, At that point in time you did not have the good strength to overcome your bad nature, but now you have regained some of that goodness, ~~and~~ and besides, with your firstborn Daniel to take care of, you are starting to learn the ways of good. "

With thas monologue, Moltic reached into his pocket and drew out the little red box.

"Seth, you know have accumulated enough personal powere to look yourself into the box and not die, but you must not be afraid, if you are, then you shalt die. Look into the box and its brightness and drain out some of the goodness so that you all shall live.

Moltic opened the Box and the blinding light pierced Seths Brain, but he was not afraid, he just saw in the middle of the brightness the...

The first part of this installment of the story of Seth and the freedom rebels will sum up what has happened. Seth and Stacy have escaped from the clutches of the Republic and have survived the journey to the small hamlet that they now live in. This small hamlet contains all of what's left of the free world and the survivors of the Republic's onslaught live here and are striving for the downfall of the republic. One day a strange person appeared at the village. This was Moltic, a personage from the past who was going to lead and direct Seth to the righteous outcome. So far Moltic has taught Seth the secret of goodness and in so doing, Seth has forced the Red box to work again. But the last piece of the puzzle that will save the rebels has not been pieced together, yet. It seems as if the puzzle gets known apart by mindless visages of people who don't know what reality is. But the two interlocking pieces that Seth and Stacy have found in their journey needs one more piece for its function to be apparent. This is the ultimate mission of Moltic...to make Seth realize reality and goodness and restore love and goodness to the earth...

The messenger returned with Seth's message to his leader the "President" of the republic. Upon hearing the message, this fearless leader turned around in a rage and began to shout obscenities at Seth. Clearly this man, his name was unknown to all, all except Seth, Seth knew who this beast was, and why he had those dreams of splendor about conquest. The leader turned to the messenger and bid him relate to Seth the fact that they would meet in the middle of the two towns, where neither of the two would have an advantage. This meeting would determine the outcome of the fight between good and evil, between Seth and the almost unknown leader of the evil Republic. The messenger left the room and slipped on a slimy copy of the...

IT HAS BEEN SET

By now Seth was getting sick and tired of all this serious talk about revolution and fight against the republic. It was time for some fun at the small hamlet. Seth thought and thought until he had completely exhausted all his ideas.

"Stacy, how can I organize an event that would bring laughter back to we rebels??", Stacy thought about what Seth had asked and finally she answered:

"You know Seth, my love. its about time this town had a gala masquarade ball. We could organize a giant dinner and then dancing till the dawn. It would be great Seth, All the women and I could cook a sumptuous dinner and we could get the Minter brothers to organize a band...its going to be soo good Seth, I love you what a good idea you had.

Seth just shrugged his shoulders and kissed his loving wife. Perhaps she was right, by having a gala affair for the whole town, the rebels life spirit and psyche force would be restored. Afterall, all the rebels, even his wife, appeared to be down lately. Seth had tried various ways, but he could not lift the spirits of the Base.

Two days passed and the arrangements for the grand day began, but Seth had a strange feeling, a felling of oncoming destiny and of a copy of the...

IT WAS COMING TO THE TIME

Preparations for the gala ball were commencing and all of the small hamlet were busy in their preparations for the fabulous feast. Stacy had taken on the role of head coordinator and the whole town was glad that she was such a good person and wanted to help everybody out. Even her son, Daniel was getting psyched for the big occasion. Although he could not speak coherently yet, everybody sensed a growing strength and awareness in this first son of Seth and Stacy.

Meanwhile in a secluded portion of the forest, Seth and Moltic continued their unending discussions and arguments about the nature of good ness and eveil. At times Moltic seemed far off and Seth began to loose confidence in himself. But Moltic when sensing this change in Seth's attitude dropped the discussions and began to carve away at a piece of strange material. Seth never had enough courage to ask Moltic what the material was, but he assumed it was a piece of wood. Seth just sat and watched Moltic carve away at the object. Before Seth realized it, an hour had passed and Moltic was gone. Seth felt a little strange. It seemed as if an hour had disappeared from his life. Seth then blinked his eyes and Moltic appeared still carving. Seth was astonished at his hallucination. But he was to ashamed to ask Moltic about it. Little did Seth realize that this first "hallucination" was to be the secret of the Rebels succsss.

About a week later, a messenger arrived at the small hamlet in the midsts of a rainstorm. He was directed to Seth's house where he related the message of the imperial leader of the eveil Republic. The time had been set. Seth thanked the messenger and then bid him farwell. So the imperial leader of the Republic, Seth's mortal enemy was to meet him for the final showdown. Good versus Evil. Seth pondered the great burden on his shoulders and then noticed that he was holding a copy of the...

A SIDE LIGHT

Bobby was quite content being a member of the rebel society. He really enjoyed working for the common cause of good. Even his friends were psyched for the oncoming struggle with the Republic. Bobby really was impressed by Seth and his leadership abilities. He wanted to be just like Seth, and he worked hard at his task of intercepting the Republic's messengers. Right at this moment he was sitting at one of the way stations that the Republic's messengers use. He was waiting for an armed assault group to lodge in for the evening.

You might say that Bobby was a mercenary. He originally was a part of the republic, but his great prowess was well received by Seth and the Hamlet and they offered him a deal he couldn't regret. Being a prime member in the republic meant that marriage was forbidden. But Bobby was a true heterosexual. We wanted to have a wife and not of the communal stuff that the Republic shoved through his ears. So one day Seth appeared to Bobby in his dream and offered him a normal life with a great cause. ~~REMEMBER~~ All through this dream state, Seth convinced Bobby of his wrongdoings and showed him the way of goodness. Bobby woke up and was completely convinced that the Rebels fight for freedom and goodness was a just one indeed. He immediately left the Republic base he was at and joined forces with the Rebels. But in the meanwhile, Bobby sat waiting for the armed soldiers. Something in his mind told him that this meeting with the guards would be a profitable one. So he just sat back and read his copy of the...

THE REAL PLAN

Bobby was waiting long for the Republic's guards to arrive at the station. (As you may remember, Bobby was the double agent who Seth enlisted in the help for the rebel cause.) Bobby knew that his mission was clear, he was to discover anything about the upcoming meeting between Seth and the fearless leader of the Republic. Bobby was about to doze off when he heard the voices of the guards. He quickly ducked out of sight and held his breath. The guards began to speak the ominous words:

"You know, our imperial leader is one hell of a smart guy, that meeting with the Barbarian Seth is a prime example of the wisdom of the imperial leader!"

"You're absolutely right, Seth thinks that the leader will just talk with him about a peaceful solution to the upcoming war. But little does he know..." Bobby was about to scream due to the anxiety about this newly discovered truth about the meeting. The guards just spoke on about their various adventures with women, proclaiming their masculinity. Bobby would not hold back any longer, he wanted to know the true nature of the upcoming meeting between Seth and the unnamed leader of the Republic. Bobby jumped out and immediately killed one of the guards. Blood was everywhere. The other guard got up and started to run away, he had forgotten his gun in the loot. Bobby ran and ran trying to catch up with the lone guard. About three hours passed before he was able to finally track down the guard.

"You must tell me about the meeting", ~~xx~~ Bobby questioned the guard with a knife to his throat. The guard was turning stark white. The guard was about to open his mouth and reveal the secret plan of the Republic just as the sun rose over the nearby mountains. The guard just spoke one word — "Lie" and then handed Bobby a copy of the latest...

THE HURRY

Bobby finally extracted the truth out of the Republic's guard. Bobby was horrified at the prospects of this truth. First was the fact that the imperial leader planned to confront Seth and engage him in mortal battle. Bobby was almost confident that Seth would be able to defend himself against this sneak attack. But then there was the second truth the soldier had told. This imperial leader had a secret weapon. The soldier was low enough in the stratification of the Republic to not know the details, but he said that rumor had it that nobody, not even the wizards of the yesterword could defy the awesome strength of this secret weapon. Clearly this was a direct reference to Moltie, Seth's confidant and help.

Bobby realized the great ~~in~~ import of these words and quickly began his two day ~~in~~ journey back to the small hamlet where Seth and rest of the Rebels lie in wait of his message. Bobby raced through the primordial wilderness, continually pushing onward, knowing that there was a chance that he would not make it in time to tell Seth before the meeting. Bobby stopped for a 2 hour rest. He felt cold in the wilderness and began to gather wood for a fire. As a starter, he used a copy of the...

THE FINALE

The whole rebel town was vibrant with color and life. The day of the great gala ball had been reached. All of the rebels were at the dance, arm in arm with their dates. When Seth and Stacy made their appearance, the whole party stopped and all gave a thunderous applause. Little did they realize the great importance of this day in the worlds history: Seth was to combat the forces of evil this day.

Soon the time had approached for Seth to leave the party and meet with the Imperial leader. Seth searched everywhere for Moltic his mentor for some final advice, but he could not find him. It seemed that Moltic had disappeared in the same way as he had come upon the rebels. Seth said a silent prayer and began on his fateful journey.

Three hours of hard traveling later, Seth stood fact to fact with his archrival, the incarnation of evil itself.

"The time has come for the empire and yourself to fall"...

With Seth's last word, the Imperial Leader raised his hand and commanded a bolt of lightning out of the clear black night sky. Seth sensing the trick, withdrew into the mental shield that Moltic had taught him to form. The bolt of lightning struck and struck again the loving Seth. But he did not waver the least bit.

The Imperial leader commanded even more strength and the lightning now struck with more violence than any atomic weapon of yesteryear. Seth did not waiver. Inside he felt stronger. As long as good thought of his loving wife Stacy and his dear son Daniel filled his brain, all would be well...

The Imperial Leader of the Republic grew weaker with each strick on Seth. At last the leader fell down and lay dead staring at Seth. The world had changed somehow for Seth. He felt invigorated but yet confused. And then he thought of a saying Moltic had taught him...

The man who clings to goodness and love, by perservering, will be the ultimate master of fate.
